DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

1. Claims 1-11 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention.
2. Claim 1 recites the limitation "holding information indicating of those receivers". This statement is not grammatically proper, and it is unclear what it means.
3. Claim 1 recites the limitation "and for controlling the signal transmitted". It is unclear which signal this is referring to.
4. Claim 5 recites the limitation "a copy protected processed signal". It is unclear if this is the same copy protected processed signal of claim 1.
5. Claim 4 contains the trademarks/trade names hot plug and plug and play. Where a trademark or trade name is used in a claim as a limitation to identify or describe a particular material or product, the claim does not comply with the requirements of 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph. See Ex parte Simpson, 218 USPQ 1020 (Bd. App. 1982). The claim scope is uncertain since the trademark or trade name cannot be used properly to identify any particular material or product. A trademark or trade name is used to identify a source of goods, and not the goods themselves. Thus, a trademark or trade name does not identify or describe the goods associated with the trademark or trade name. In the present case, the trademark/trade name is used to identify/describe a type of connection and, accordingly, the identification/description is indefinite.
6. These issues should be fixed in claims 7-11 as well.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

7. Claims 1-6 and 7-11, as best understood, are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Okuyama et al., USPN 5,987,126.

With regard to claims 1 and 7, Okuyama discloses a transmitter for selectively transmitting content signals to a receiver including a means for processing a content signal for copy protection (column 9 lines 37-46), logic means for determining by authentication whether the connected receiver is operable to function in accordance with copyright protection encryption technology (column 19 lines 45-65), and transmission controlling means for holding information indicating those receivers that are not enabled to copy content by using either the content signal or the copy protected processed signal (column 10 lines 7-11) and for controlling the signal transmitted by the transmitter according to whether or not information indicating the connected receiver is included in the held information such that a non-copy protected signal is transmitted if the connected receiver is not enabled to copy content (column 10 lines 11-18).

With regard to claims 2 and 8, Okuyama discloses sending the copy-protected signal to devices capable of copying (with dummy key, column 10 lines (26-28), and the unprotected signal to those incapable of copying (column 10 lines 19-25).

With regard to claims 3-5 and 9-11, Okuyama discloses monitoring for changes in the network (column 26 lines 24-32).

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

8. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

9. Claim 6 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Okuyama.

With regard to claim 6, Okuyama discloses the transmitter of claim 1, as outlined above, but does not mention storing information in a tamperproof device. The examiner took official notice is a prior office action that it is well known in the art that sensitive information could be held in a tamper-proof manner to improve security of information. Since this official notice was not traversed, it is taken as admitted prior art (MPEP 2144.03). It would have been obvious for one of ordinary skill in the art to make the controlling means of Okuyama tamper proof, since it holds sensitive information, to better protect the information from illegal copying.
